

Frédéric CAUX

French professor of dermatology trained in Saint Louis Hospital, Paris who did a postdoc period in Luis Diaz's lab in the University of Wisconsin, USA, working in the field of autoimmune bullous diseases (AIBD).

His interests are blistering diseases but also genetics.

He participates in consensus conferences and clinical trials on AIBD.

He is the President of the French group for the study of AIBD. His scientific achievement consists of 171 publications (including Lancet, NEJM).

Since 2016, Head of the department of Dermatology of Avicenne Hospital, University Paris 13.

Involved in teaching Dermatology and previously was President of the French College of Teachers in Dermatology.

He is involved in several activities of the French Society of Dermatology (Research Committee, International Committee) and the European Academy of Dermatology and Venereology (Communication Committee).

Currently President of the French Professional Council of Dermatology and Venereology.