

Terrence A. CRONIN

Earned his medical degree from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina and completed his dermatology residency and served as chief resident at the University of Miami, where he is currently an associate voluntary professor.

Dr Cronin was the President of the American Academy of Dermatology from 2023-2024.

He has been the President of the American Society for Mohs Surgery, the Florida Academy of Dermatology, and the Florida Society of Dermatologic Surgeons.

He has served on the Board of Directors and on the nominating committee of the American Society of Dermatologic Surgery.

In addition, Dr Cronin maintains a private practice in Melbourne, FL with his father and niece.

He recently published an innovative surgical textbook- the Atlas of Anatomic Reconstruction After Skin Cancer Surgery with Springer publishing.