

Marius RADEMAKER

Dr Marius Rademaker BM FRCP(Edin) FRACP FNZDSI DM FACD (Hon) is an academic medical dermatologist in Hamilton, New Zealand.

He has held numerous academic and national/international positions including editor in chief of the Australasian Journal of Dermatology, New Zealand's Medicines Adverse Reactions Committee (MARC) as well as Pharmacology and Therapeutics Advisory Committee (PTAC).

He has been lead author on a number of consensus statements on the use of immunomodulators in dermatology.

Dr Rademaker has been involved in both basic and clinical research since 1985.

He has over 300 scientific publications and has been invited to speak to over 20 different national dermatology society meetings as well multiple international dermatology conferences.

He has chaired scientific symposium at the last 4 World Congresses of Dermatology.